

McCall Stone

AP Portfolio 2014

Score: 5

Breadth

Concentration

Concentration Statement

Passion is the central idea in my concentration. High school students are generally categorized as lazy and uninterested, but when most teenagers become interested in an activity and it becomes something they put their all into. It shows when they are doing the thing they love through their body language and facial expressions. I want to show that teenagers aren't always unmotivated, but rather, quite motivated to do the best they can and help their team reach success.

Motion shots from high school sports and extracurricular activities are my main focuses for my concentration. In my action shots of students playing a sport, dancing, or supporting their fellow students you can see how much they are for what they do and the determination they have. For example the shot of the football player (image 2) you can see how hard he is working through the intensity of his running and the twisting in his face. The passion is apparent and shines through, you can see how in the zone he is, how everything else that is going on in the world seems to have stopped. At my school, Newbury Park High, we have what is called the Panther Pit. It is a group of students who dress up in black and gold (our school colors) and gather together in the stands at sports games. Along with the cheer team, they pump up the crowd and show the pride we have in our athletic students. Not only do we have passionate players, but also supporters. Without them, the games just wouldn't be as intense and motivated. In my shots of this group (images 1 and 12) you can see the motivation in the faces of the students, not only with the screaming, but also with the waving of pom-poms and face paint.

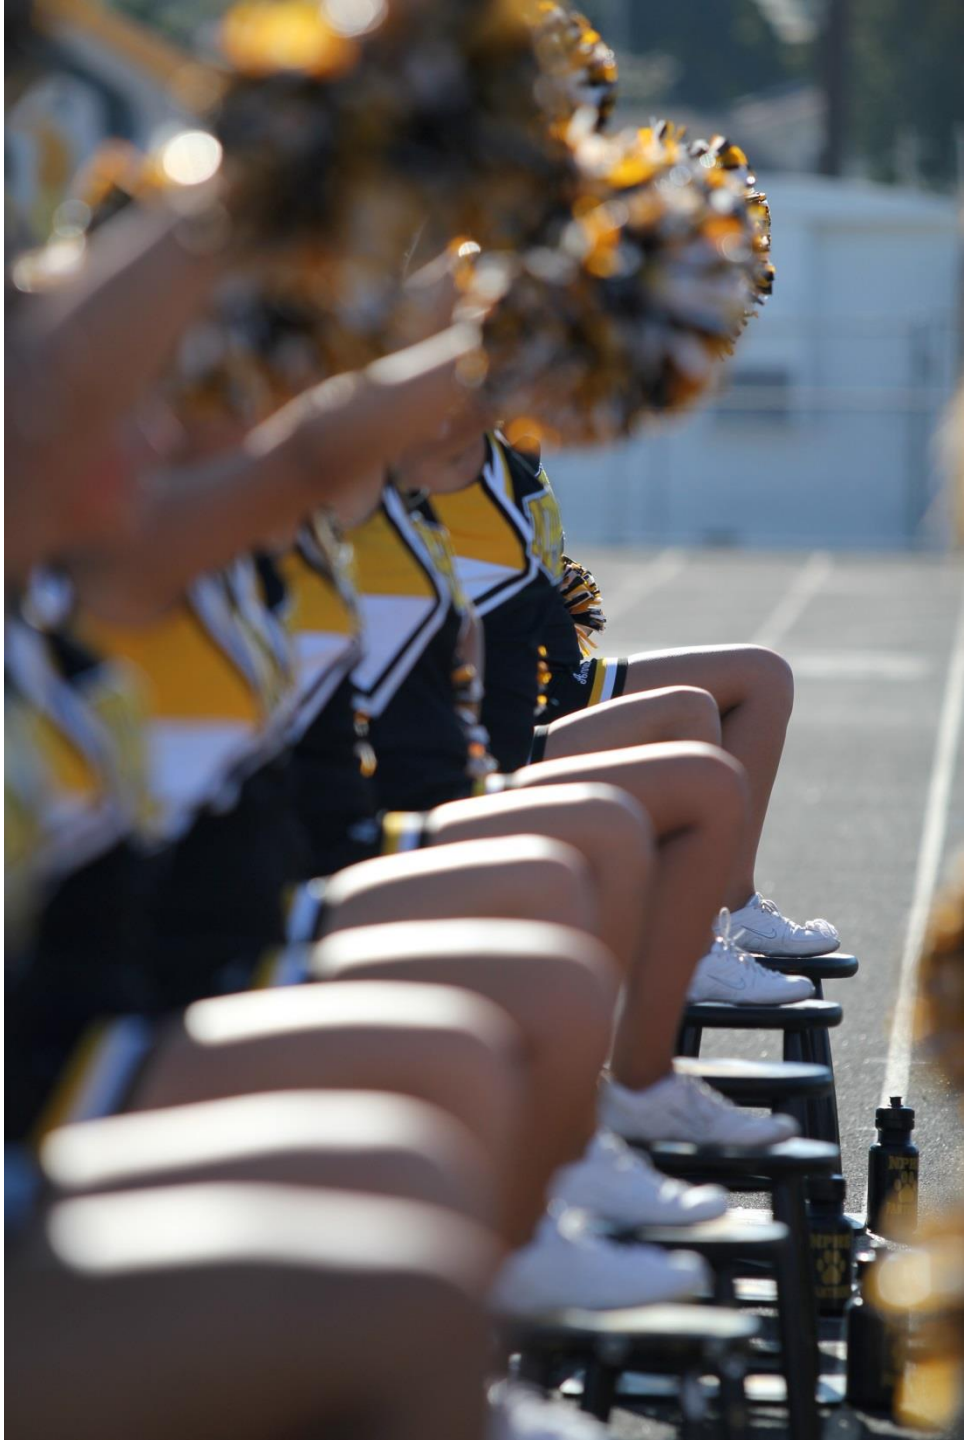

PANTHER PRODUCTS

