

Chris Spencer

...

AP Portfolio 2019

Breadth

Concentration

Concentration Statement

My concentration is water and the different forms it can take. For example, you can have a cloud, still water; however, it is in vapor form and can reflect the beauty of the sky. You can have water in its most basic form that can magnify, reflect, splash, and flow. What seem like opposites of each other can be made by water. Whether you think about it or not, water is all around us and we can sometimes forget that, but with water, you can create some spectacular photography.

To me, water is like nature's canvas. It is just a clear liquid and it might seem blank at first, but nature can make amazing work out of it. Reflections of the background on the ocean. White clouds turn into a painting of the sunset. Even the motion of water can change it drastically. From still droplets of water to raging waves of white wash of the ocean, the most important element to every living thing on Earth is also unpredictable.

