Written Evidence

I work at a dog adoption agency and see so many dogs that are waiting months to find their forever home. In my sustained investigation I wanted to capture the emotions from a dog I adopted from my work and the journey that he has gone through ever since he found his forever family. However, this sustained investigation is not only about my dog but to raise awareness for the challenges most adopted dogs go through.

In images 1-5 shows the limited freedom and the lifestyle these dogs are going through. The peeling paint and darker colors give off a more depressing ambiance which is perfect for displaying a more somber emotion for the dogs. For images 6-11 I wanted to capture the moments of the dogs where they are starting to feel hope and comfort around people. For images 12-15 is representing the “free” feeling that the dog is experiencing where he doesn’t have to feel worried or anxious about finding a home.
